About Jack Cutter Jack Cutter is a solo acoustic steel string guitarist based in the San Francisco Bay Area in California.

Jack started performing in the Bay Area in the 1970's. He played solo and with small groups (acoustic and electric) as well as wrote and recorded. After roughly 10 years, there followed a foray into studio engineering. He soon became co-owner of Razor's Edge Recording in San Francisco. Following this, he pursued software development up until the early 2000's. During the 'programming days', he was asked by a friend about the guitar that was sitting in the case. Well doggone if that didn't relight the fire. As a result, Jack started a return to music as a full time pursuit and is going strong.

Jack currently performs throughout the Bay Area specializing in solo acoustic guitar, playing instrumental selections based in a range of styles from Classical to Rock to Meditation Ambience with emphasis on fingersyle arrangements.

"Jack Cutter played for my 60th birthday party, Nov. 2016. Jack did a superb job of modulating the volume to keep the music loud enough so the guests felt they could talk without everyone listening, but not so loud as to drown us out. He quieted down and stopped when there were toasts and for cake cutting/birthday wish. He was excellent and helped to make the party a success. I recommend him without reservation, and am reserving him for the 65th.

“As I get out of the station at Montgomery Street, I hear this otherworldly guitar. I go up the escalator, but I'm still able to hear it. I go back down and introduce myself to Jack. There was a lightness and comfort about him. It was good to be around him. Check out his website: www.jackcutter.com. He has a great album called “Into Byzantium” that you can listen at his site.”

"Two different generations, two countries and now, a new song. San Francisco-based psych-folk guitarist (and regular BART train station busker) Jack Cutter collaborated with emerging Brighton-based singer and producer David Harks to add some vocals to the local legend's typically solo instrumental music. The co-written result, Serpent Strut, melds the old with new for a meditative listen; especially mesmerizing is Cutter's ethereal, high-pitched harmonics."
